MESSRS. R. D. & J. B. FRASER,

MUSEUM STREET BUILDINGS,

IPSWICH.

Offer facilities for House Furnishing fully equal to any London or Provincial firms—they manufacture largely in their own Works Cabinet Furniture of a Superior and Artistic Character—and they are careful that in the production of Bedding and Upholstery all materials used are free from impurities, and specially prepared by improved Sanitary process.

FLOOR LAMPS.

As an inexpensive but Artistic, pleasing article of Home Decoration, the Hammered Iron Floor Lamp at 14/9 is worthy of special attention. It is very strong, fitted with Copper Oil Reservoir, Duplex Burner, Chimney, and Globe, and will brilliantly illuminate a large room in a very effective manner. Hundreds of Lamps of all kinds in Stock. Alabaster Asmos Lamps 1/5. Wizard 3/9. Bracket Lamps 3/3.

BEDSTEADS.

A very effective display of Brass Bedsteads and Bedding is on view in our Museum Street Windows. In addition to which is a very elegant assortment of Satin Down Quilts, marvellous for their rich, but subdued Art Colourings; most effective in appearance and moderate in price. Full-size Brass Bedsteads, £3 17s. 6d. to 20 Guineas. Satin Down Quilts, 39/6.

ART FURNITURE.

Messrs. FRASER would impress upon the public that although an article may be pretty, artistic, and durable, it need not necessarily be expensive, and their aim is to produce articles which will justify this statement. As an illustration they invite an inspection of Wicker Chair, upholstered in dainty cretonne at 9/11, and a charming occasional Chair to resemble Chippendal Mahogany at 5/11.

SYSTEM OF BUSINESS.

Messrs. FRASER will compete on our terms with any price Lists that may be produced, whether it be the Stores or any London or Provincial Firm. They guarantee all articles they sell, mark all in plain figures, allow a Cash Discount of 5 per cent. or pay carriage at the option of the purchaser. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists on application. Experienced assistants will attend to give estimates, and generally to advise as to Furnishing.

[illegible words, which could have been audible to no one else than to Miss Sandford, but not produce on her the effect which the person who uttered them probably expected. She turned pale and trembled for a moment, and then broke into a rattled laugh!

She recovered herself, however, almost immediately. "You say you can prove your accusation," she said, "but I suppose, since you have taken the trouble to make this appointment with me, you must have something else in view. What is it?"

"I will keep the secret," he replied, rather sullenly, "upon certain conditions. You must agree to put me in possession of information on some matters that come within your reach, and to keep me posted regarding them from time to time, as I may require. Your husband is a leading member of an organisation that is hostile to the interests which I represent, and there is reason to think that you have hitherto been ignorant of this fact, and I shall take occasion, at the proper time, to make you acquainted with all the details of it. It is enough to say, for the present, that your husband is entirely in the confidence of this organisation, and has in possession all its secrets, and many of its most important documents. These he keeps under lock and key, and in various safe places. You must find out what they are, get access to them, and communicate with me. Unless you promise to do this, I will denounce him to the police. This is my offer. What do you say to it?"

"Will you tell me who you are?" demanded the girl after a pause.

"You will know at the proper time. But I must have your promise first."

"I have recognised you for some time past," said the girl, fixing her eyes upon him with a penetrating look. "If you had known me it would have been better for you. I am not the person to whom you wrote your letter. I am not the letter. I am entitled to sign it; but I will tell you the name which should have been written there was Robert Johnson!"

Although the man in the white doublet was carefully masked, there could be no doubt that this statement electrified and discomfited him. It was entirely unexpected. Although he knew by sight the lady whom he supposed to be in the orange domino, he had never spoken with her, and had therefore no reason for not supposing her to be his voice. But the lady who actually was in the orange domino, whom her friend and employer chose to call Miss Sandford, had never in her life once recognised as Lizzie Pond—this young lady, as it is needless to remark, was familiar with every intonation of Johnson's speech, and with all his every movement and gesture. While carefully guarding her own incognito, therefore, she had no difficulty in penetrating his disguise; and had been interested less by the information about Colonel and Mrs. Desmond, than by the odd light which his revelations and demands threw upon his own character. Who was this Robert Johnson son to whom she had trusted so implicitly, and whom she had allowed herself to care for so much? That he could not be what he had hitherto given himself out to be was certain; but whether he was a robber, a blackmailer, or something even more sinister and undesirable, was more than she could determine.

It should be observed, moreover, that Mrs. Desmond had, within the foregoing few days, held some private and confidential interviews with Lizzie, the effect of which had been to modify the latter's views as to the former's conduct and responsibility. Lizzie no longer considered the French lady to have been guilty of any serious breach of her wifely obligations; while as to the charge of murder, she had not hitherto once given of the possibility of such a thing, and had repelled it with scornful incredulity. Meanwhile, she had had the presence of mind to suppress the manifestation of her opinions, and, in the assumed character of Mrs. Desmond, to lead Johnson on to disclose all his cards, and then to nonplus him with the revelation that he was not to Mrs. Desmond, but to some other and (to him) unknown person, that he had been speaking.

But Johnson, though worsted for the moment, was not a man to receive a blow without attempting to return it; and in a moment he stepped forward with hands outstretched, labouring to tear the mask from the incognita's face. She divined his purpose, and retreated; at that moment there was a scream from behind the two, and a shriek, followed by a cracking and rending noise, and ending in a crash, which protected her for the time being.

This is what had happened. Mrs. Desmond, on being left alone in her retreat behind the scenes, had presently applied herself to hear what she could of the dialogue that was going on within a few feet of her ear. Before long, however, she became aware that her seclusion was being invaded. There was a noise of feet shuffling over the bare boards of the floor, and of voices conversing in a cautious undertone. Peeping through a chink between two boards she saw five men standing at a little distance and talking earnestly. They were all clad in long red dominoes and white silk masks; but one or two of them, presuming upon the supposed security of their position, had removed the latter. The light was so dim in this region that she could not clearly distinguish the features of these persons; but from what she could see of them, they did not strike her as being familiar.

All of a sudden she heard a stealthy step close at hand, and shifting her position, she was able to catch a glimpse of a black figure advancing, like a cat, in the direction of the red domino conclave. This figure disappeared behind some intervening object and she saw it no more. But now the five men, in response to a suggestion from one of their number, moved in her direction until the nearest of them was within reach of her arm, and a piece of canvas fastened over a window that had intervened between them. "This will do better," remarked the individual in question, and although he spoke in a low tone, Mrs. Desmond could hear him distinctly. She turned to her husband, the colonel, who did not appear to have gone to Philadelphia after all!

Her first thought was to escape, but on turning to do so she was confronted by the black figure who was just about to introduce himself into the retreat. She had an impression of a long, lean visage, with a sharp pair of eyes very near together; and then the intruder clapped on his mask and vanished. She caught her feet in the folds of her domino and stumbled against one of the flats; it gave way and fell against the baize partition, rending it apart and coming to the ground with a crash.

The entire rear of the stage was laid open to the gaze of the multitude by this mishap; there was an instant's lull of startled silence, and then there was a confused uproar, many people being panic-stricken, others jeering and laughing, others again shouting that there was no danger, and everybody setting up a hubbub of one sort or another. The five men in red dominoes scattered at once, replacing their masks as they did so; and the mysterious personage in black was nowhere to be seen. The lady in the orange domino glided round behind the boxes and reached a private door opening on the lobby, along which she passed rapidly towards the entrance. The man in white marched in the direction she had taken and started in pursuit, but a crowd of half-drunken revellers had rushed in to inspect the scene of the catastrophe and blocked his way. He turned and made his way with difficulty across the floor of the ball-room, but though he reached the front of the house in a few minutes, all trace of the orange domino had disappeared.

Lizzie Pond, on finding herself free, had quickly removed her domino, and reversing it, put it on again with the lining outside. This was of dark blue, and she had no longer any need to fear recognition. It had previously been arranged between Mrs. Desmond and herself that in case of accident they were to rendezvous in the ladies' dressing-room. Thither Lizzie now betook herself, and to her great relief found Mrs. Desmond already awaiting her.

That lady was, not unnaturally, in a state of agitation; she had formed no conception of the discovery of Colonel Desmond, and expressed apprehension lest he should get home before them and so become aware of her presence. Lizzie quickly reminded her that the colonel, having announced that he was going to Philadelphia, could not reasonably show himself at his own house much under the next day. Somewhat reassured by this argument, Mrs. Desmond ventured into the corridor, and the two ladies found their carriage and were driven home.

As they left the hall, the clocks of the city struck the hour of midnight, and at the same moment a great burst of music from the orchestra gave the signal for the general unmasking. The carnival assumed a wilder and more fantastic phase than ever, and the night of the nether world had gained the ascendency.

CHAPTER XIII.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

On the following afternoon, about three o'clock, a despatch was handed to Inspector Byrnes at the Central Office. The effect of it was to make him instantly take his hat and hurry from the building.

It will be remembered that the Shambling Man, in his pursuit of the silver cigarette case, had come to a stop at the loan establishment of Mr. Solomon Sibley. The case, he learned, had indeed been pawned there: but it had also been redeemed on the evening before his arrival, and by the same person (according to his information) who pawned it. Beyond this point, he had been at fault; and though he had been unrelaxing in his efforts to trace it since then, nothing had come of them.

And indeed, Inspector Byrnes informed the Shambling Man, is aware that the pawning of the case was witnessed by Robert Johnson, and that the latter, for reasons known to himself, had prepared a face simile of the pawn ticket, and had disguised himself so as to completely answer the description of the owner of the case, and had succeeded in obtaining it. He had then discovered and removed the jewel which it contained; and there our information also came to an end.

That Johnson, however, was not an ordinary thief, must already have been obvious. His designs, whatever they were, were more far-reaching and deeply-laid than could be held consistent with any ordinary robbery. We shall be prepared to expect, therefore, that the cigarette case, though a handsome and valuable object in itself, was not the thing which had aroused his cupidity. The extraordinary value attached to it by its owner had stimulated his curiosity and suspicion, which the discovery of the paper had apparently justified; but, the paper having been secured, he had no further use for the cigarette case; in fact, its peculiar and noticeable appearance rendered it, under the circumstances, a rather embarrassing thing to have about him. He might sell it, destroy it, throw it away, or pawn it. Upon consideration, he adopted the last mentioned course. By doing so there would be a chance at least, that the rightful owner would ultimately get it again.

His first idea was to return it to the safe-keeping of the worthy Mr. Solomon Sibley, but he reflected that this might involve him in difficulties. He would be obliged in the first place, to resume his disguise: and again, Mr. Sibley might feel some excusable surprise at seeing this little silver box appear and disappear so often within so short a space of time. There were, however, plenty of other pawnshops available, where neither he nor the article was known; and to one of them, on the day following the French ball, he betook himself. It happened to be situated in the Bowery, not far above the corner of Prince street.

He went in, and handed it over the counter to one of the clerks. The latter turned it over in his fingers, glanced at the customer, and retired toward the back of the shop. Three or four minutes passed, and, as he did not return, Johnson rapped on the counter. The clerk presently reappeared.

"Well," said Johnson, "what are you going to give me on that thing?

"Why, can't tell you," replied the clerk, "we've got to test it to see what it's worth."

"It can't take long to do that," said Johnson.

"The head of the house is engaged," was the reply. "He'll fix it in a minute or two."

After some further waiting, Johnson became impatient.

"Look here," he said, "if your boss is going in for a banquet with fourteen courses, I won't trouble him. I'm in a hurry. Give me back the box, and I'll try my luck somebody who doesn't prefer eating to business!"

"That's all right," the clerk replied. "He won't be a minute. He's at work on it now."

Something in the fellow's manner struck Johnson with a shadow of misgiving.

"Give me it back," he said. "I don't want any funny business. Give it back, do you hear?"

"It's coming," said the clerk; "it's coming—don't you fret. Here it is!"

As he spoke, someone entered the shop, exchanged a glance with the clerk, and then walked up to Johnson and laid his hand on his shoulder.

"I've been wanting you some time," he said, in a pleasant voice. "Would you mind stepping round the corner with me?"

Johnson turned and looked at him. He was a good-looking man, of about forty years of age, and of strong and active build. He recognised him at once, though he had never had any personal intercourse with him before.

"You are Inspector Byrnes, are you not?" said he.

The inspector nodded. "That is my name," he replied. He nodded to the clerk, who handed over to him the cigarette case. "Now we're ready," he added.

"I should like to know what I'm wanted for," said Johnson.

"I'm going to tell you. It's nothing much. But we can talk it over more comfortably at my office. Come along."

The Englishman shrugged his shoulders, but knew better than to resist. The inspector slipped a hand beneath his arm, and in a few minutes they were in Mulberry-street, and in the inspector's room. The latter took his seat at the table, and in response to his questions, the prisoner gave this account of himself:

"My name is Robert Johnson," he said. "I live in Pacific-avenue, Jersey City. I am an Englishman—have been in America less than a year. I am an operative by profession, and am employed in the office of an Engraving Company in this city."

The inspector made notes of these replies, and then seemed to fall into a reverie, stroking his moustache and studying the carpet. Suddenly he looked up and asked, "Do you know many people in New York?"

"Not a great many," Johnson answered. "Chiefly the employés in the office. I have made the acquaintance of a few persons in Jersey City."

"Who is your landlady over there?"

"Mrs. Pond."

"How do you amuse yourself?"

"I go to the theatre occasionally. Sometimes I take a trip down the bay, or up to Highbridge. Last night I was at the French ball."

"Have a good time?" inquired the inspector, carelessly, flipping a speck of dust off the sleeve of of his coat.

"Rather too good, I fancy," the other replied.

"Who's the manager of your office?" was the next question, asked abruptly.

"His name is Colonel Hugh Desmond."

"Do you know him?"

"Yes, I know him quite well; and he knows me."

"I guess you're all right," observed the inspector, slowly. He leaned back in his chair and crossed his legs. Then, as if from a passing curiosity, he asked, "Whom do you go to the theatre and down the bay with, as a general thing?"

Johnson hesitated for the first time. But he reflected that prevarication would only do harm, and presently replied, with reluctance, "I generally go with a young lady."

"I see! Someone you're interested in, I suppose. Known her long?"

"Ever since I lived in Jersey City. She is my landlady's daughter."

"Do you live in the same house with her, then?"

"No; she is engaged as companion to a lady in this city."

"Ah! What lady is that?"

Again Johnson hesitated. "Mrs. Desmond," he said at last. "Colonel Desmond's wife. I recommended her for the place myself."

"I see! That makes it a convenient arrangement all round," the inspector remarked, with an air of friendly interest. "So you went to the ball together last night, did you?"

"No; I didn't want to take her to a place like that; I went alone."

"Well, a man likes to get off and see a bit of the world once in a while. It's a pretty lively affair, the French ball, especially after midnight. Did you pick up any acquaintances there?"

"I met no one that I knew before. But I did make some acquaintances."

"Well, I don't know as I will detain you any longer, Mr. Johnson," said the inspector, throwing down his pencil and sitting erect. "By the way, though, he continued, putting his hand in his pocket and producing the cigarette case, "I'd like to have you tell me how you came into possession of this thing?"

"I'll tell you all I know," replied Johnson, composedly; "but the fact is I don't recollect much about it. I saw it for the first time last night."

"Picked it up at the ball, eh?" Found it on the floor of the dining-room, perhaps?"

"No, not exactly," said the other, who had already made up his mind as to the story he would tell. "I found it in my pocket this morning, when I woke up. I didn't know how it had come there. But by-and-by some of the circumstances came back to me. I had taken some champagne early in the evening, and as I'm not accustomed to drinking, it went to my head. I danced a few times, and got mixed up with a number of people. Everybody was masked, and there didn't seem to be any need of introductions. A dozen twelve o'clock the masks were taken off, and I went with some of the people—three or four, I should think—to get something more to drink. It went on from one thing to another, and at last I suppose I got pretty full. There was a man there who said he was an Englishman, and seemed to take a great fancy to me. I can't recall all that we did and said; my memory began to get queer about that time. But I recollect his saying that silver box out of his pocket and his saying that he wanted to give it to me—as a pledge of friendship, or something of that sort. I didn't want to take it, but at last we compromised; I took it and gave him some money for it. I don't know how much, but I fancy, from the look of my pocket-book this morning, it must have been quite as much as the thing was worth. At any rate, when I came to my senses this morning, I didn't want it any more, and I concluded that the best thing I could do would be to raise what money I could on it. So I took it to the first pawnbroker I came across; and you know the rest."

"You had rather a lively time of it, certainly," observed the inspector, with a light laugh. "But most men in your place would have lost their money without getting the cigarette case. Can you describe the man who sold it to you?"

Johnson reflected that the inspector might have information on this point from Mr. Sibley, and that it would lend verisimilitude to his tale if he confirmed that information. "It's all rather foggy to me," he said, rubbing his hand across his forehead, "and I don't believe that I could swear to him, if I saw him again. But I should say he was a man about twenty years older than me, with harsh features, and—let me think!—yes, I'm pretty sure he had a beard."

"Well, I'm sorry to have put you to so much trouble, Mr. Johnson," said the inspector, courteously. "I have no reason to doubt your story, and it may be of assistance to us. It will perhaps be necessary for us to ask you to repeat it at some future time. Meanwhile, I hope you'll allow me to keep the cigarette case until its history can be traced back a little further. So far as you are concerned, the matter will be of small importance, any way, but small things, you know, are sometimes links between more weighty ones."

He rose, as if to intimate that the audience was at an end.

"I shall be on hand whenever you want me, inspector," said Robert Johnson; and he went out.

As he descended the steps, there was a man smoking a cigar in front of a house on the opposite side of the street. When Johnson had gone about twenty yards down the street, this man hastily put up his overcoat and sauntered along in the same direction.

SEVERE DAMAGES.

£2,250 RAILWAY DAMAGES.

Mr. William Kirkland Cutler, in the Queen's Bench on Tuesday, and the Baron Ayrton Railway Company, whose registered office is in London. Plaintiff had been in defendants' service as chief draftsman, and while passing over a level crossing a closed vehicle at Culshaw, in the Argentine Republic, was injured by an engine to such an extent that his left arm had to be amputated and the greater part of his left foot had to be removed. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff with £2,250 damages. Judgment accordingly.

COLLISION AT CARLISLE.

Expresses met at Carlisle station on Tuesday. The trains from Glasgow and Edinburgh, on the Glasgow and Carlisle Section, and the Scotch express from Perth, came in collision at Carlisle, and there made up into the Midland Railway express. The North British portion had arrived, and was being marshalled in readiness for the Glasgow portion, when that train entered the station. The driver, apparently misjudging his distance, ran into the rear of the North British train. Several passengers complained of being bruised and shaken, but were able to proceed upon their journey South, except a Mrs. M'Causland, of Harrow Road, Paddington.

HIGH CHURCHMEN AT NORWICH.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

ATTEMPTED MANUFACTURE OF A SENSATION.

Commenting on a paragraph headed—"Prayers for the Dead at a Norwich Church"—published in Saturday's edition of a Norwich daily paper, a correspondent who signs himself "A Worshipper at the Requiem at St. Giles," writes:—"I am not going to enter into any theological discussion in your paper, but I was present at that service, and I say let justice be done to all, and let the truth be spoken impartially concerning all alike. This is what I allude to:—Yesterday morning, at the usual hour for Celebration of the Holy Eucharist, a development of High Churchism, somewhat novel and unknown to the majority of the people of Norwich . . . except for a few minor details, the service which we have been performed at the new Church at St. Giles' Gates . . . in every respect, save one . . . most of them made obeisance before the altar. Some did not, but they made the sign of the cross. Every line that was said, including the responses, was intoned, as in the services of the Established Church. The service subsequently called it, and the language of the service was intoned with such a pronounced ecclesiastical mannerism as to make it difficult in the body of the church whether the vulgar or the Latin tongue was being used. Nothing, we believe, the first time that a "Holy Eucharist for the Burial of the Souls of the Faithful Departed," has ever been offered in Norwich in a Church of Established Religion. The service in question, to begin with, was neither "novel nor extreme." Requiems are now quite common services in Norfolk and Suffolk, and in the familiar chant of Barnby's concluding the service. The choral accompaniment was not full, parts of the service being merely recited. The preacher said nothing about the Adorable Sacrifice subsequently to the Consecration, as the sermon came in its usual place after the Nicene Creed. There was no difficulty in following every word of the service. There was no mannerism in the celebrant beyond reverence, and, lastly, the Holy Eucharist has been many times offered for the FOOTBALL NOTES.

[By HALF-BACK.]

It was indeed a cheering sight to see the ropes of the Portman Road enclosure so well lined as was the case on Saturday afternoon. The cheering sunshine brought out the ladies and the match was a field one in full force, and in spite of a counter attraction at Broom Hill in the Rushmere Club's annual sports, a large number of visitors to the Town ground were gathered to witness what proved one of the best matches of the season. It was a galloping fight and although Ipswich had the "stripes," and their friends were not in the least backward in testifying with exceeding heartiness their sense of gratitude at the display of "Light Blue" form, Colchester and our excellent supporters—the oft-maligned "three-pennies"—upon such excellent terms with themselves as when their play was applauded to the echo, and by the encouragement of their lusty lungs was unstintingly awarded "our boys" on Saturday.

It certainly was a surprise to me to observe the excellent form shown by Colchester, the reserve man, upon the extreme left. His pace was of the best, and in spite of the fact that the half opposed to him was none too smart, the command of the ball was excellent. He certainly deserved his place, but showed more inclination at times to indulge in that common error amongst smart centre-forwards, of trying to "walk" or using the ankle dribble too frequently, when passing is invariably the better method, in order as it may appear to gain the confidence of the crowd by the display of the ankle-play generally he is eventually robbed. Stanley Turner was on the day's play, however, the smartest forward, although the whole five showed plenty of dash in attack.

Why do the Ipswich forwards persistently refuse to assist in the defensive work of the centre? It was a noticeable fact that when the greatest danger threatened, the whole of the forwards, Stanley Turner excepted, would be content to remain in front of goal—the somewhere near the half-way line without attempting in the least to intervene. I should strongly advise—if I should not be considered presumptuous—the captain to take his forwards seriously to task upon this point. The art of goal-packing in moments of danger is practically unknown to the Town men.

The half-back division was as usual the mainstay of the team, and I cannot remember to have seen it at fault than we have yet this season seen him, whilst Haward treated his opponents with the greatest coolness, and Woods worked untiringly and well. Bailey was a little off-colour, but Walford still improves. Cornell is quick to little on hand. The visitors never really appeared to get well together, and their defence was good the forwards were generally very much at sea.

What a contradictory team the Orwell Works "Sockers" must be. One Saturday they get a licking of 8—1 at Brantham, and next week we find them scoring a draw with the Alexandrians at Bury. The Bury team are generally considered Essex champion Athletes, but this scarcely looks like it. Ipswichians will have an opportunity of noting the performance of the West Suffolkers this afternoon, when the latter take one of their rare visits to the town, being engaged with the Hamrers upon the Broom Hill enclosure. The Town seniors will be paying a visit to Colchester, when they meet the representatives of that town upon the Cambridge Road ground.

It may interest my readers to know that E. A. Kent has so far recovered his injury as to enable him to play last Saturday with the School team at Norwich, where he contributed largely to win the match for his side. We may, therefore, soon expect to see him again wearing the "Stripes."

The Orwell Works Rugbeians, aided by two old St. Helen's men (two of their best by-the-bye), turned out in full strength on Saturday against the holders of the Eastern Counties' Cup, and succeeded in gaining a somewhat easy victory. It was pleasing to notice that the "Saints" have still some good men left, and others, I have reason to believe, will also be available later on. The home team were short by the absentees, and another dark horse or two are likely to be unearthed later on, so that we shall probably have two spankers to Rugby Union Clubs in the course of season is much older. I must congratulate the Works upon their performance, it is another testimonial to the over vereal nature of that new nine-hour-system institution, the Orwell Works Rugby Club. Long may they flourish!

The vexed question of the North Suffolk League has happily now been settled, and the clubs have already got to work. There will be one settled in the competition on Saturday. Beccles Caxton—to whom we look as the possible champions—were entertained at Bramfield, and left the Hurts Hall ones very few goals to the bad at the conclusion of a really good game, in which the defeated by the odd goal in three thereby. Kirkley and Leiston had a tough struggle of it at the latter place, the Junior Cup holders coming out of the ordeal with a score of 4—3 in their favour. Lowestoft Town were somewhat badly handled at Bungay, the Freemen winning by four to one. A fourth game was set down for decision, but the match fell through owing to the non-arrival of the official referee. This was the meeting of Halesworth and Beccles Colleye, in which the former were top winners by seven to nil.

The aspirations of the Ipswich Middle School Past and Present in the direction of the Norfolk Charity Cup were rudely shocked by the Norwich Churchmen upon the Earlham Road ground on Saturday, the Old Boys having fondly imagined that they had returned home beaten by no less than six goals to nil.

In the West Suffolk League only two matches were decided. Long Melford gaining their first victory at the expense of Sudbury, whilst the Haverhill Rovers were a single goal too much for Glemsford at the latter place.

Cowells' visit to Stowmarket was attended by the most disastrous results, there being no less than seven goals scored against them without a single reply. Ipswich Wanderers Hockey were good for their engagement with the Fauconberge lads by 7—2. The Town Reserves drew with Felixstowe. Harwich and Parkeston beat the Ipswich Rangers by 3—2 after a good game, whilst Old St. Mary's (Woodbridge) and Wickham Market played a draw, 1—1. Aldeburgh and Saxmundham succeeded in their return engagement at Woodbridge, and thus secured the trophy, honours at the close being "easy" 2—2.

Cowell's are engaged at home this afternoon, St. Peter's, Colchester, being the visitors. The second goes to Hadleigh. It is worth remark that the printers now boast four teams.

In the first division of the League on Saturday, Sunderland and Blackburn Rovers met at the Lancashire town and a fierce struggle ended in a drawn game 1—1. Aston Villa beat Everton in a League fixture. A draw was also the result of the meeting of Wolverhampton Wanderers and Notts Forest at the former town, the score standing 2—2. Derby County at home beat Preston North End 4—1. Burnley at home by at Sheffield Wednesday 3—0. At West Bromwich "Throstles" were too good for Small Heath, "Brums," Small Heath, the final score reading 4—1. At Stoke the "Potters" beat Liverpool 3—1. On Monday Aston Villa beat Sheffield United 3—0, Sunderland by no less than 5—0, whilst on the same day Preston North End met another reverse, this time at Stoke, the home winning by the narrow margin of 2—1. The table revised to date stands as under :—

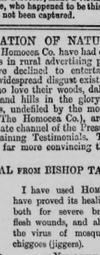
SHOCKING CRIME IN ROME.

A painful sensation has been excited in Rome by the news of the brutal murder of a Sister of Charity at the Hospital Santo Spirito. The victim was 59 years of age, and had been for seven years in charge of the consumptive patients. She was most exemplary for patience and devotion in fulfilling the duties of nurse to a man who, after having been a patient, became a nurse at the Hospital, and had to be discharged for his carelessness of duty. Smarting under this threatened vengeance on the Director. He managed to get into the Hospital on the day when visitors were admitted, and, not finding the Director, he attacked the first person found alone, who happened to be this gentle nun. The murderer has not been captured.

DESECRATION OF NATURE.

Although the Homocea Co. have had one of the greatest schemes in rural advertising put before them, they have declined to enter into it on account of the widespread disgust existing in the minds of all who love their woods, dales, fields, streams, rocks and hills to see the glory of their natural beauties, unedified by the modern bill-poster. They (the Homocea Co.), are content with the legitimate channel of the Press, and by the simplicity of their contracts, they can point to cures, far more convincing than mere assertion.

TESTIMONIAL FROM BISHOP TAYLOR.



I have used HOMOCEA, and have proved its healing virtue, both for severe bruises and flesh wounds, and also to kill the virus of mosquitoes and chiggoes (jiggers).

Yours very truly,
(Bishop) WM. TAYLOR.

American Methodist Episcopal Mission.

LORD CARRICK says HOMOCEA cured him of bleeding piles, when all else failed; that he prescribes to a labourer who was lamed by a stone falling upon him, which it cured. A woman had a pain in the elbow and could not bend it for a year, and it cured her, and another used it for scurvy on her leg. A man was thrown from his horse and crosses from him with the words, "It is the most marvellous thing I have ever known."

LADY VINCENT, writing from London, says: "HOMOCEA is such an incomparable application for Rheumatism or Neuralgia, that she wishes to have two more tins sent."

HOMOCEA

is so valuable a remedy that no one can really afford to be without it.

All wholesale houses stock HOMOCEA. It can be obtained from Chemists and others at 1s. 1½d. or 2s. 9d. per box, or will be sent by post for 1s. 3d. or 3s. from the wholesale agency, 22, Hamilton Square, Birkenhead.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON A HARWICH TUG.—On Thursday night an accident occurred on board Messrs. Ransome & Sons' barge Garnet, in Harwich Harbour, to an engineer named Bird, which will probably deprive him of the skull through the engine, which had stopped on the centre, starting again on Bird trying to move it by a bar of iron. Dr. Henry ordered his removal to the Union Hospital, and he was taken thither by the Garnet the same evening.

SOCIAL EVENTS AT HARWICH.—A subscription dance, to which about 40 ladies and gentlemen attended, was held at the Three Cups Assembly Room, on Wednesday evening.—A Badminton Club for ladies and gentlemen will be held weekly during the winter months at the Public Hall, Harwich.—Mr. Ernest Stuart is the hon. secretary.—A smoking concert in connection with the Harwich and Parkeston Football Club was held at the Club House, Phœnix Hotel, Dovercourt, on Wednesday evening. Notwithstanding a wet evening, a large number of members and friends were present, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

PAINFUL SEQUEL TO A HARWICH WIFE ASSAULT.—On Friday, at Harwich Guildhall, Joseph Harvey, a Marine private on board H.M.S. Onyx, stationed at Harwich, was charged with having assaulted and used violence towards his wife, Emma Harvey, on August 7, Wellington Road.—Complainant said defendant struck her and cut her lip through, and threatened to "do for her."—Police-constable Butler, of Harwich, proved the charge of assault, and bound the defendant over to keep the peace for three months. The parties afterwards went home, and in the morning complainant asked for money to enable her to go to her friends at Chatham, but her husband refused. In the afternoon she was observed lying in the Wellington Road by Police-constable Schooling, who assisted her home and left her in charge of her husband. Dr. Arnold quarter-past five was observed by Coastguardsman James Butler, at Harwich, walking towards the sea. Butler, after watching her for some time, heard a splash, and saw a woman in the water. He ran and pulled her out, and Police-constable Mann, whom he called, took her to the station. She was on the way to the station she repeatedly called out "Oh, let me die!"—The unfortunate woman was brought before the Harwich county court on Monday, and committed for trial at the Essex Quarter Sessions.

HOXNE UNION AND ITS RELIEVING OFFICER.—A letter was read to the Hoxne Union Board of Guardians on Monday stating that the Local Government Board still declined to sanction the appointment of Mr. Thirkettle as relieving officer for two relief districts. On nearing Lattinford he was by some means was thrown from his cart into the road. He was very much cut about the head and face, and has since been confined to his room.

NACTON AND LEVINGTON READING-ROOM AND CLUB.—Notwithstanding the well-nigh impassable state of the roads, a large audience assembled in the Sewell Hills Memorial Institute on Thursday evening to enjoy a capital programme prepared by Mrs. Copeland, in aid of their institution. Without enumerating the various items, it is sufficient to say that they fully proved the possessor of a rich contralto voice, while Messrs. Copeland, Barham, Dewhurst, Thibonham, and Lecerve sustained their reputation long acknowledged. Miss Ethel Copeland, the pianist, gave entire satisfaction to the performers and public.

OXFORD TECHNICAL CLASSES.—At the first Committee meeting the Rev. E. M. Scott was unanimously re-elected chairman, and Mr. W. A. Belcrove also unanimously re-elected secretary and treasurer. The Committee decided to start an ambulance class at Sudbourne Schools next Wednesday, for men only, over which Dr. Bensly has kindly consented to preside. Dr. E. Wallis, who ably conducted classes at Orford for three years, has been appointed by the County Council as examiner. The Committee further decided to hold lectures on health, at Orford Schools, early in the new year, the County Council having selected Dr. Bensly as lecturer.

ORFORD SCHOOLS.—The diocesan inspector's (Rev. G. Herbert Rendall) report just to hand is as follows:—"In spite of the drawback of being closed for some period during the spring, the children have done well in all the subjects of the elementary department, 'Good' throughout although the syllabus was curtailed. In the upper department Standard III. to VII., Old and New Testament, and Catechism 'Good,' better than the Prayer Book. Standards I. and II., good throughout. Wallis, who duly conducted classes at Orford for three years, has been appointed by the County Council as examiner. The Committee further decided to hold lectures on health, at Orford Schools, early in the new year, the County Council having selected Dr. Bensly as lecturer.

It is the fate of all those who, waiving their principles, take up the rôle of the MR. GLADSTONE. opportunist in order to gain popularity or votes, to be rended by their partisans when, in their sober moments, they venture upon expressing their real sentiments. This is now the fate of Mr. GLADSTONE. On all Radical sides he has been attacked for his serious views on the Local Veto, and now he is the butt of their assaults for his expressions of real opinion on the question of religious education in elementary schools. "School Board" GLADSTONE is gagged"? is the head line in the Radical Westminster Gazette, and then follows the scathing criticism: "Another bomb has been dispatched from Hawarden. The last one spread consternation—and it may turn out, ruin—among the Local Veto folk. This new one will spread confusion, if nothing worse, among the 'Compromise' folk. It is made up of very curious and startling ingredients." To begin with, MR. GLADSTONE 'will not undertake to say' what his own Education Act had in contemplation on the religious question; but that, on the other hand, he will undertake to say that it was not so wisely framed as the Scotch Act, which frankly contemplated denominational teaching out of the rates. Those who recall the vehemence with which MR. GLADSTONE denounced the compromise at the time will be somewhat staggered at his tone now. But that is a minor perplexity compared to what follows. MR. GLADSTONE'S letter was sent to a correspondent who wanted a clue 'to thread the labyrinth.' Let us hope he is happy now that he has got it. . . . Will MR. GLADSTONE'S correspondent, with that clue in his hand, vote Diggleite or progressive? . . . We will not undertake to say; but we decidedly, if we were Diggleites, we should consider MR. GLADSTONE'S letter worth a good many voters to us, and should placard the ex-Liberal leader as a Rileyite on the strength of the sentence:—'An undenominational system of education framed by or under the authority of the State is a moral monster; and if the Act of 1870 requires or permits anything of the kind, its provisions involve a gross error.' Even the phrasing is reminiscent of Rileyism, for what MR. GLADSTONE'S calls 'a moral monster,' MR. RILEY had already called 'a misshapen beast.'

STEALING A SISTER'S BROOCH AT IPSWICH.

Edward William Cross, aged 19, Wright's Yard, Black Horse Lane, was charged at the Ipswich Police Court on Monday, upon the information of his mother, with stealing a brooch belonging to his sister.—The lad's pitiable appearance in the dock would have verged on the ludicrous if it had not been evident that he was oppressed by the occasion, and incapable of restraining his emotions. He sobbed bitterly, and trembled and sobbed.—The statement of the mother was clear. Prisoner had been for two years in the navy, but since last July had been out of work and lived by his mother. The brooch he pawned. Other misdeeds which he had committed previously had been overlooked.—The Mayor asked the prisoner if he had anything to say in answer to the charge, on her son promising to amend. She agreed, the undertaking was given, and the prisoner was bound over to come up for judgment if called upon.

THE WRECK AT SOUTHWOLD.

A SCENE OF DEVASTATION.

TWO MILES OF WRECKAGE.

On Tuesday afternoon one of the Journal reporters had occasion to visit Southwold, and while there took advantage of the opportunity of visiting the scene of the wreck which took place about a fortnight ago in Southwold Bay. The story of the disaster has already been told in these columns, and the vessel's name mentioned, but there has hardly been conveyed a true sense of the extent of the deplorable affair. The vessel we speak of was the Russian barque Ardent, hailing from Memel on the Baltic to London with a cargo of firewood. The wood varied in length from three to five feet planks, and the vessel was thoroughly packed with them. All went well until off Southwold Bay, when the vessel was struck by a steamer, and in a moment the latter had knocked in her the crew of the ill-fated barque abandoned her, taking refuge on the steamer. The barque gradually settled down in the water, becoming waterlogged. She drifted on, and was ultimately sighted by three Southwold fishermen, who, hoping to secure salvage, made for the vessel. The wreck was then very low in the water, but the nature of her cargo prevented her from sinking. The task of piloting the barque into port was, however, a very dangerous one, as the waves which were then high and the vessel rolled horribly in the trough of the sea. These barely seamen, however, set the sails, and the barque was brought safely into harbour. Much damage in her, and she failed to rise over the waves, but rather pressed through them. Every hour the wind grew stronger, and the sea higher. Fortunately the vessel may be imagined, was a very unpleasant one. The whole sea was lashed into fury, and breaking over the wave broke high above the bows, sweeping the decks. The barque did not shake herself clear of the water and spring forward as she would in a calm sea, but was too far gone for that, and as the night drew in the lot of the men on board became very precarious. The wind blew a hurricane, and the vessel was off Dunwich the fishermen threw out two anchors, but these were useless. The vessel dragged and was fast drifting on to the shore. Then the mainsail was hoisted, and just before the barque struck the men were taken off by one of the lifeboats. There were two, one Dunwich and one Southwold, but the latter which rescued the men does not appear quite clear. Some say that the Southwold boat was launched from Southwold, and next morning the scene in the neighbourhood was one of a most depressing character. The vessel had been pounded to pieces, and the cargo was scattered up and down the coast for about two miles. The sea was absolutely covered with wood. Men came down to the beach to pick up the wood in boats, but the work was fraught with great danger. The sea was very turbulous and

CAST THE WOOD ASHORE WITH GREAT FORCE.

One had to be very careful or he ran the risk of having his legs broken. The season on Tuesday was not a bad. The timber had been sold a few days before in small parcels. The prices realised were very low, as it is so difficult to get at the wood. The beach is now covered with loose shingle to the depth of about a foot, and this makes traversing very arduous. The timber was still lying for about a mile, and all that now remains of the vessel is her bow, which is buried in the sand. The sails and a large portion of the masts on Thursday were still attached to their remnant of what was once a fine vessel, but were submerged, even at low tide. A large quantity of the wood is of no use whatever, and this the incoming tide tossed about as a plaything. A fisherman assured us that there were tons of wood buried in the sand. He was trying to cut the edges of wood sticking out from under the shingle. A couple of coasts of men have fenced up a shelter of sails, and are engaged in recovering bars of iron, etc., from the water.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

A Big Fight Coming.

It is probable that there will be a large number of contests in the election of Guardians for Ipswich, the polling for which is fixed for December 19th. It is understood that several labour candidates are coming forward.

A Critic Criticised.

The Financial News of Thursday speaks out very freely regarding the comments of Mr. W. B. Jeffries, late of Ipswich, on the transactions of the Mexican Railway Company "An apt illustration of the paucity of wisdom with which a railway may be governed was afforded (it begins) by the remarks of Mr. Jeffries, who occupies a seat on the Board of the Grand Trunk of Canada. It accuses him of 'uttering nonsense,' and concludes that it must be extremely irritating to the Directors of the Mexican Company to be exposed to such 'childish and ignorant criticisms.'"

The Agricultural Writer.

The writing of descriptive paragraphs regarding sheep is really fast approaching a fine art. Writing in the Live Stock Journal this week, in reference to the Suffolk Show of ewe lambs, held at Ipswich this week, a correspondent says:—"The winning pen were very evenly costed and typical in character, but not so forward in condition, or so big a scale as the reserve pen and the lot from Stetchworth Park. The latter were simply marvellous in respect to substance and weight, considering their age, but just lacked the necessary refinement of character." We are glad to hear his sheep were not disqualified because they were not sufficiently refined in character.

The Reverse of the Coin.

The final statement in respect to the Royal Show held at Cambridge exceeds the anticipations formed at the close of the exhibition, and East Anglian agriculturists may well congratulate themselves on the success attained. It appears that the Royal Society benefits to the extent of £1,059, while the Cambridgeshire and Isle of Ely Agricultural Society will also reap pecuniary advantage by the holding of the 1894 show. The Local Committee have a balance of about £40 in hand, which will be placed to the credit of the Cambridgeshire and Ely Society. The thorough manner in which the Cambridge Committee conducted the arrangements for this year's Royal, aided as they were by the indefatigable efforts of Mr. R. Peters, as secretary, have now received their due reward.

Royal Show.

Baron Pollock.

Baron Pollock, the learned judge who this week condemned to death the man James Canham Read (with whose name one of the foulest deeds in criminal history has been associated for the past four months), and who adjudicated at the last Suffolk Assizes at Ipswich, is the last of the barons of the defunct Court of Exchequer. His Lordship is also one of the four Serjeants-at-law now serving at the end of last year, the others being Sergeants Simon, Spinks, and Pulling. Up to November, 1875, the coif was always bestowed upon a newly-made judge. A circular black patch at the top of the forensic wig is the distinguishing mark of the degree. Serjeant-at-law; it figures in the judicial head-gear of Baron Pollock. In point of service the Baron is senior to all the judges. He was elevated in January, 1873, and is therefore within a few weeks of completing his majority.

Wickham Market Tramps.

Now that Wickham Market has to some extent got rid of the tramp nuisance, a proposal has been made which would doubtless have the effect of bringing these undesirable visitors back again to their favourite haunt. The proposition took the form of providing the tramps with a mid-day meal, an undertaking which it is admitted would be a new departure, and ultimately rejected at the meeting of the Plomesgate Guardians on Monday. Experience has proved that it is unwise to be over indulgent to the average tramp, who, in reality, does not want work and would not accept a job were it offered him. The Board of Guardians as a whole would strictly observe the Local Government Board's rules for dealing with tramps, eighty per cent. of whom are mere idle loafers, the chances are that the expenses of certain unions would not be called upon to bear more than their fair share of the burden in entertaining this great body of ne'er-do-weels.

Royalty at Home.

An Ipswich resident who the other day was driving over the Prince of Wales's Norfolk estate furnishes us with particulars of a charming incident in the home life of the Duchess of York, and which goes to show the close sympathy between our English Royal Family and the people at large. Far from the meddling crowd of gay London, and freed from the stiff formalities of Court life, the Duke and Duchess appeared to be delivered to the great Sandringham School just as the scholars were dispersing to their homes for the day. His Royal Highness immediately drew up his carriage, and literally packed as many of the children as he could into it, and drove over them for some distance along the road. The youngsters, of course, were delighted with the ride—utterly oblivious of the honour which was being paid them—but, adds our informant, it was quite a pleasant thing to see the royal couple themselves. Little acts of kindness like these make our Royal Family and their subjects kin, and while kindly hearts remain "more than coronets," so will our monarchical system be dear to Englishmen.

Ipswich Guardians' Election.

The Finance Committee of the Ipswich Town Council may be under the impression that they have done a clever thing in the revision of the scale of fees to be paid to the returning officer (Mr. A. F. Valliamy) in the coming guardians' election, but their new scheme will not please everyone as much as they imagine. The original plan by the old scale was that the returning officer was to be paid three guineas for every 750 electors. Now he is to be paid 1½ guineas for a parish containing under 1,000 voters, and 4½ guineas for one containing more than a thousand. The reason for such a suddenly big bound is not apparent. By it the officer will receive in the first year for St. Helen's parish 1½ guineas, and the next year, probably, for the same parish, he will receive 4½ guineas. The original plan

SHOCKING DEATH OF A CHILD.

Little Annie Rawlins, a child of eight, was crossing Bolton Road, Blackburn, when she was knocked down by a steam tram. Her head was cut off and crushed to a pulp, while her body was dreadfully mangled.

JABEZ SPENCER BALFOUR.

ANOTHER CHARGE OF FRAUD.

The New York Herald publishes a despatch from a correspondent at Aspinwall, stating that another charge has been brought against Jabez Balfour for fraud. A conviction would postpone extradition for years.

A CLERGYMAN'S CURIOUS CONVICTION.

The vicar of St. Mary's, Milverton, Leamington, has ordered his organist and certain members of his choir to sever their connection with a local amateur operatic society; and in an interview he says he has no use to see the ground that the taking part in worldly things is not fit preparation for spiritual work."

A DISHONEST COUNTY COUNCILLOR

At the Bucks Assizes Charles Pope was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for forging in 1892 acceptances to certain bills of exchange, amounting to over £200. Prisoner, who at the time was a Bucks County Councillor, absconded, but surrendered to the police three weeks ago.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE IRON HORSE.

A POTMAN'S TERRIBLE JOURNEY.

Charles Martin, a potman, who was found late on Saturday night insensible on the railway at Epsom Town Station, died on Wednesday last from the effects of the injuries he received. He fairly round consisted of forty-six kilometres, making 16,790 kilometres a year, or nearly the circumference of the earth. He consequently walked during his term of service 730,214 miles.

ANTHRAX IN SUFFOLK.

OUTBREAK AT SUDBURY.

A cow, belonging to Mr. Bareham, Gregory Street, Sudbury, died from anthrax on Tuesday. Lately the animal had been running with others on the Common Lands, and in consequence of the outbreak active service have been ordered off the Common Lands, and are now to be confined at the various owners' premises, so as to prevent further contact with the cattle of the commons. noted the fact to the Board of Agriculture.

DR. NANSEN'S EXPEDITION.

A HORRIBLE PREDICTION.

A horrible prediction regarding Dr. Nansen's Polar expedition comes from Dublin. Reading a paper before the Royal Irish Academy on Arctic tides, the Rev. Dr. Haughton expressed his opinion that Nansen and his party are doomed. He is of opinion that the expedition will get enclosed in the ice and be crushed to all the horrors of cannibalism before the last man dies of starvation. The attempt to reach the Pole he condemned as mad project founded on the most imperfect knowledge, and he feared that the Government of Norway had not forbidden an expedition which was certain to end in disastrous failure. Nansen's own letters to his friends would prove how precautions will turn out to be unfounded. gloomy prognostications will turn out to be unfounded.

CHURCH SCHOOLS DESTROYED.

REMARKABLE CIRCUMSTANCES.

Early on Wednesday morning a fire was discovered to be raging in the Church Mission Schools in connection with the Church of St. Thomas, Stockport Road, Cheetham Hill. The whole building, a substantial stone structure, was completely gutted. Just a year next Saturday, during the disastrous fire storm, the roof of the church itself was burnt to the ground. It has since been rebuilt, and preparations were in progress for its consecration on the very day the schools were to be used. Services were to have been held in the schools. No clue has been discovered as to the origin of the fire, but the circumstances attending it are very remarkable, and it is the subject of much comment in the district.

DREADFUL STRUGGLE IN A MENAGERIE.

LION TAMER SEVERELY INJURED.

A fearful scene occurred at Great Harwood, near Blackburn, during the performance of Day's Travelling Menagerie. An African lion tamer named Montana entered the cage of a magnificent lioness, and he performances with which he usually delights the lioness at one end of the cage, went to the other end to prepare for the concluding incident of the performance. For a moment the animal was diverted from the beast, and suddenly she sprang the whole length of the cage, pinning Montana with her paws to the floor. She then seized his throat, followed, the lioness dragging Montana round the cage, trying to throw him down, but he clutched the bars and managed to keep on one leg, thrashing the beast with his heavy whip. He freed himself once, but the lioness seized him again, and Montana then beat her off. All this time her rest hot at one end, which was passed on to him, and managed to crawl, bleeding and exhausted, to the door. The lioness tore Montana's clothes to tatters, and his leg fearfully lacerated by the animal's teeth; but he refused to have a surgeon, and dressed his wounds with a towel. He is now under preparation, after which he sank to sleep exhausted.

A CURIOUS HIRING CUSTOM.

THE END OF A REMARKABLE FEATURE.

A curious custom, the meaning of which is certainly not apparent on the face of it, will in all probability cease, after the present year, to form a feature at the north country "hirings," as those fairs are known at which men and women offer themselves for the hiring of their services as labourers or servants, and it cannot be said that its abandonment is likely to lead to any passionate regret. It appears that in the case of the Scotch Whitsunmarkets, as at other places, it is the custom for all desiring to take service to stand in the street with a straw in the mouth. Those who do not wish to be out of keeping with the humaner spirit of our times that young women and girls should stand in the public street for employment presided over by Lady Lawson, has led to arrangements being made so that those or to be hired should meet in the Public Hall. This, so we learn from the Manchester Guardian, will, it is hoped, be the means of not only the best securing shelter for the women, who have hitherto been obliged to brave the elements on these occasions, but also to conduce to their greater comfort. It would be interesting, however, before the custom falls into desuetude, to learn what was the reason for employing emblems of service. For, as is well known, a former servant or pet was the straw in the mouth of Isis, and the practice of thus wearing it is a survival of Isis worship, was never depicted without it. The most obvious use for a straw, when carried in the mouth, is as a means of absorbing the superfluous saliva consequent on the use of alcohol, and on these grounds we can well imagine that the practice would excite the disapproval of the eminent abstainer who sits for the Cockermouth Division.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN EAST SUFFOLK.

GROWTH OF THE MOVEMENT.

The Technical Instruction Committee of the East Suffolk County Council met at Ipswich on Tuesday, prior to the Council meeting on the 27th inst. The annual report from the Lowestoft Town Council was discussed, it being stated that the lectures given in connection with the Technical Instruction Committee had been given up, as the excessive cost of which appeared to the Committee to be somewhat disproportionate to the benefit derived. It was decided to have provided lectures on veterinary science and horticulture, the latter with a special view to the cultivation of allotments. The tabulated details showed that classes had been held in veterinary science, horticulture, laundry work, navigation, magnetism, electricity, mathematics, ambulance, nursing for women and girls, ambulance for men, shorthand, and type-writing. At this class there was an average attendance of 140 students. Art classes were also held with an average attendance of 169 students. With the report was an

to enable the Town Council to extend their operations. This latter the Committee refused to recommend, as the sum now received, viz., £300, and the grant of £300 was nearly £193, and because the average attendance was only 1-16th of the average attendance at the Council classes.—Mr. Alderman (Rev. D. T. Cowan) presented his report for the quarter, the chief item of interest in which was the number of classes for which applications had been made by the local committees, particularly those for continuation classes. These latter have increased from four in number in 1892 to 76 this year. There is also a more inviting range of useful subjects brought before the pupils—the result of the vigorous canvass which the Technical Education Council under what is called the teachers' holiday classes. A large body of school teachers have been given the opportunity for a month of becoming acquainted with practical operations in chemistry and other sciences with most happy results to the continuation class pupils. The complete list is as follows:—Mathematics, agriculture 2, plumbing 2, butter-making 2, cheese-making 2, building construction 1, cookery 10, continuation classes 76, chemistry 2, electricity 2, magnetism 2, mathematics 2, drawing 2, farriery 7, French 1, health 8, horticulture 18, laundry work 4, mensuration 1, mathematics 1, magnetism and electricity 1, navigation 1, physiography 1, physiology 1, sound, light, and heat 2, tool craft 2, veterinary lectures to farmers 1, wood-carving 11, teachers' classes (page 9, teachers' cookery 6, teachers' holiday 2, butter-making (held) 12, cheese-making (held) 4, police ambulance 4, agriculture at Ipswich for farmer 1, veterinary lectures to farmers (held) 2 : grand total, 231.

CLASSES ALREADY IN OPERATION

RUPTURE CURED without operation. All who wish to get rid of Rupture and trusses should send to Mr. S. J. SHERMAN, Hernia Specialist, 64, Chancery Lane, London, E.C. King Street, Manchester, for his Book post free 7d.

UNIONISTS AND FREE HOMES.

Mr. J. Chamberlain, M.P., has written a letter to a correspondent on the importance, as indicated in his Birmingham speech, of giving working men facilities to purchase their own houses. This plan was originated by Mr. Wrightson, and was at Newcastle approved of in principle by Mr. Balfour.

SUICIDE OF SHIPWRECKED SAILORS.

A STRANGE STORY.

The bodies of nine of the men lost by the foundering of the Spanish steamer Tormes off the Pembrokeshire coast have been recovered. There were deep wounds in the throat of two of the bodies found on Saturday and Sunday, and it is conjectured that these two men took their lives before the vessel went down. The chief engineer, who was also found, had his throat cut. Samuel, Daniel Iathers, of Bilbao, also committed suicide by blowing his brains out soon after the vessel struck.

A SCENE OF TERRIBLE GRANDEUR.

The American liner Kenilworth landed at Liverpool on Sunday with the crew of the oil-cask steamer Allegheny, of Philadelphia, which when laden with petroleum was sunk by colliding with the Belgian vessel Caucus shortly after leaving Delaware on October 1st. The crew of the Allegheny made for the boats, but the first two could be launched, and as she went down the headlight exploded, causing the petroleum, which covered the sea for miles around, to become ignited, and there was a sea of fire into the midst of which the boats were launched in an amazing manner. The Rev. H. W. Beauchamp pointed as the scene was very well rendered, and consisted of two duets for the violin, played by the Misses Rodwell, and two ballads sung by Mr. Alfred Bidlay. The encore for the quality of the vocal music, it is enough to say that Mrs. Bernard Partridge and Mr. Okeden are accustomed to sing in public, and Mr. Okeden was welcomed as a fresh addition to the musical force of the neighbourhood. The delights of song were those most appreciated by the audience. The song "Where did you get that hat," sung in character by Mr. Findlay Dunn, was received with an amazing encore song. The Rev. H. W. Beauchamp obtained an encore for his song "Off to Philadelphia," the proceeds of the entertainment are to be given to the fund for the new Mission Room, so required in Stutton.

CONCERT AT STUTTON.

A successful concert was held on Friday, November 9th, in Stutton Schoolroom, thanks to the energy of Mrs. James Fison. There was a large and enthusiastic audience, the programme was of a high character, and was very well rendered, and consisted of two duets for the violin, played by the Misses Rodwell, and two ballads sung by Mr. Alfred Bidlay. The encore for the quality of the vocal music, it is enough to say that Mrs. Bernard Partridge and Mr. Okeden are accustomed to sing in public, and Mr. Okeden was welcomed as a fresh addition to the musical force of the neighbourhood. The delights of song were those most appreciated by the audience. The song "Where did you get that hat," sung in character by Mr. Findlay Dunn, was received with an amazing encore song. The Rev. H. Lawrence, the bankrupt's and baker's property, in the occupation of Cheshire Street, for many years in the occupation of Mr. Robert Baker, deceased, and Mr. A. Lawrence:—Two freehold cottages adjoining, retails £8 9s., Mr. Chas. Goode, £26. The vendor's solicitors were Messrs. Cross and Ham. The property was offered by direction of Mr. G. CLAIM BY AN IPSWICH PROPERTY OWNER.

At the Ipswich County Court on Wednesday Ellis Titchmarsh, of Christchurch Street, Ipswich, claimed from Isaac Bloomfield, of Felixstowe Road, the sum of £6 15s. 6d. for rates and rent. In October, 1892, the plaintiff let the defendant a house in Christchurch Street, which, when the defendant's wife made an application for the hire of it. The plaintiff stated the rent would be payable weekly, but that the rates would be required to pay the rates. The defendant subsequently consented to the plaintiff's terms. As Mr. Ellis Titchmarsh had obtained the assignment of his property in the hands of his mother, he only received the accounts yearly, and it was not till the accounts were sent in for the present year that he found his brother had paid the rates. The defendant and his wife both protested that no mention was made at the time of the hiring of the house as to payment of rates.—The Judge allowed the plaintiff the amount of his claim with costs.

THE MURDERED PRIEST.

REPORTED CONFESSION.

If a Reuter's telegram received in London from Toulon is to be believed, the mystery surrounding the death of the Argentine priest Father Segui, in a Soho hotel, is cleared up. According to this dispatch Eugene Robello, who is now in the Toulon prison on the charge of having robbed and murdered Father Segui. The police found upon Robello a sum of 5,000fr., of which he could not give a satisfactory account. Robello is a cook who passed as Father Gabriel y Segui, and Chaplain of the Army of the Argentine Republic, on leave in France. On being subjected to a searching examination by the Commissary of police, Robello confessed that he had drugged the papers of the priest and one murdered in London, and at last admitted that he himself was the murderer of Father Segui. According to the Reuter telegram Robello's confession proves conclusively that he knows anything of the matter. Although the London police have no official knowledge of the confession, Inspector Eugene Robello, an information has been sworn at Marlborough Street Police Court to support a warrant for his arrest, and his extradition will at once be demanded.

THE CRY OF THE CHILDREN.

REV. BENJAMIN WAUGH AT IPSWICH.

In recognition of the persevering work done by the Ipswich and East Suffolk Committee of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the Rev. Benj. Waugh, the eminent philanthropist whose work in attending the annual meeting, in the Town Hall, on Thursday, as he has done on former occasions. Mr. H. Barnard, the Mayor of Ipswich, was also in attendance were the Deputy-Mayor (Mr. S. E. Anness), Canon Rogers, Mr. Walter Turner, Mr. Lewis Noy, Dr. Mackay, Mr. Cobbold, Mr. Hyam, and Miss Ada Cooper, joint hon. secretaries.—The Chairman said he had been asked to preside at a representative meeting of the friends of those who had to deal, in the first instance, with cases of cruelty to children. He supposed that the Committee would be glad to hear the report of a member of one of these bodies as to the way in which the cases were chosen, presented, and prosecuted. The Committee of employers, of which were his (Mr. Bernard's) opinions in regard to the Society, but felt sure that he would

and he was happy to say that he did. (Applause.) There had been no doubt a good deal of misapprehension and misunderstanding, and prejudice and misconception about the work of the Society, mainly on the part of official persons of the Society, and sometimes made a special point of view. That prejudice had been very natural. They were inclined to think that the police were the right persons to do the work, and that the Society would do it, but if the work were to be put into the hands of the police it would be necessary to appoint persons in addition to the present force. On the one hand, nor the ratepayers on the other, were at present at all inclined that the work should be done by the addition of employing more persons. Moreover, he doubted whether, if extra detectives were appointed, they would get the same information that the Society did in the course of its work, which accumulated information from all sources, gradually by experience formed definite opinions, and concluded that the work on which Mr. Waugh was now so equally applied in Suffolk and in Somersetshire, in the town and in the country yesterday and to-day, and that it was also to the police, the prosecutions would vary very much in different parts of the country. Then the Committee would be glad to hear the explanation of the criminal, but the care of the child, and it

WAS OF IMMENSE ADVANTAGE TO BENCHES, charged with the duty of dealing with the child to place the children in a place of shelter superior to the Workhouse. The Society further undertook to act as the children's friend upon the bench, and

TEMPEST AND TORRENT.

EFFECT OF THE STORM IN SUFFOLK.

ROADS IMPASSABLE THROUGH FLOODS.

MANY FARMS SUBMERGED.

After the very mild autumn the weather in Suffolk during the past week has served as a rude awakening to the inhabitants generally; for during the greater part of the week incessant rain, storm and blustery have visited the country with unusual force, though fortunately the amount of damage done is extremely small in comparison with that suffered in the West of England. In Ipswich district the rain commenced to fall on Sunday evening, and continued to fall in torrents with only slight intervals of cessation. Accompanied by a strong breeze, house property in many parts of the town was damaged by slates, &c., being blown from the roofs, and the gale was likewise characterised by drenching rain, and towards evening vivid flashes of lightning were frequent; while it was a fact that was noticed in the West of Tuesday was a bright but chill November day, but this welcome change was followed on Wednesday by a repetition of Sunday and Monday's depressing meteorological conditions. That the storm has been general throughout the country is evidenced by the many reports to hand from our district correspondents.

LARGE TRACTS OF LAND FLOODED NEAR DISS.

The heavy rainfall on Saturday night and Monday and Wednesday flooded a considerable tract of land on Stunton Common and along the course of the Waveney in the immediate neighbourhood of Diss.

RYE.

Monday, the most inclement day of the month, witnessed a somewhat severe though brief thunderstorm, which occurred between six and seven o'clock, accompanied by very heavy downfalls of rain. The wind was grand, and the lightning both vivid and incessant for at least half an hour. The phenomenon was very unusual for this time of the year. Rain has fell very heavily on Wednesday and a portion of Thursday, the result being that the river overflowed, submerging to a large extent the low lying meadows between Wool Bay and Waterloo. The downfall, however, brought its advantages with its discomforts, for the ponds and other places which have been dry for use for domestic purposes, and which were nearly empty for a very long time, are now filled to overflowing.

OXFORD.

On Monday rain fell heavily during the day, with an occasional thunderstorm. In the night the storm made her appearance for a short time, and vivid flashes of lightning with thunder succeeded. Afterwards a heavy gale set in, which has continued to-day.

STOWMARKET: LAND AND ROADS SUBMERGED.

Monday's unusual rainfall caused large tracts of land in the vicinity of Stowmarket to be submerged; while at the bridge on the Ipswich Road the water covered the road to a depth of 2ft. 6in. Reading on the same ence at the back of the Chemical Works, the tributary stream from Rattlesden and Combs might be seen joining the Gipping, which, overflowing its banks in all directions, covered thousands of acres, and rendered many of the ways impassable. The flood was one of unusual severity. During Tuesday night the water considerably subsided, owing to all the floodgates along the river being taken out.

ACRES OF LAND UNDER WATER AT HADLEIGH.

In consequence of the heavy and almost continuous rain in the river Brett in the neighbourhood of Hadleigh has overflowed, and many acres of land in the valley are under water. No damage worth recording appears to have been done by the storm up to Tuesday night.

A SHEPHERD MISSING AT COVEHITHE.

A shepherd named Folkard, employed by Mr. George Wright at Covehithe, near Southwold, has been missing since Monday morning. He left his home between five and six a.m. on that day, having previously told his wife that if he did not find some sheep, believed to have strayed, she would hear of him again. The omission to report the matter to the police authorities to institute an exhaustive search, which has up to the present been fruitless.

SHIPPING PHENOMENON AT SOUTHWOLD.

Every morning this week the greeting at Southwold has been, "What a night!" One night the lightning was really fearful, and the thunder deafening, and we look back many years to find a parallel. A singular phenomenon was seen on Wednesday morning, when the moon was seen shining brightly. This was followed almost immediately by a heavy fall of rain and flooding torrents of rain.

REPORTED THREE WRECKS OFF LEISTON, BUT THE NEWS WAS A HOAX.

During the past week the gales have been raging this week much apprehension was felt respecting the safety of vessels lying off Sizewell Bay. It is the invariable custom for a large number of the inhabitants to rush down to the coast whenever distress signals are made, but, owing to the wind being off the land, no vessels were seen in distress. It cannot be regretted that a false rumour was set afloat on Wednesday afternoon that three vessels were ashore off Sizewell, and, consequently, a large crowd were down on the beach on Wednesday evening, only to find that they had been the victims of a hoax.

HARWICH AND LOWESTOFF LIFEBOATS LAUNCHED.

A strong northerly gale blew at Harwich on Monday night, and several small boats were sunk or smashed in the harbour. The Great Eastern Railway Continental Hamburg steamer, which left Harwich and Mere Hook of Holland to Parkeston, was considerably damaged by the force of the sea.

LIFEBOAT ABANDONED.

Writing in reference to the sale on the East Coast on Wednesday of the Aldeburgh lifeboat, Aldeburgh correspondent states that the Lynn schooner William and Mary parted her anchors off the Cork, and, by means of the telephone at the Aldeburgh Coastguard Station, the boat crew were summoned from their midday meal. There was at once a great rush for the lifeboat station. The boat was launched, but the crew found that a half-cuff warp took her direct into the broken water of the inner shoal, which was heavy. So quickly had everything been done that the crew saw that the schooner before the latter was down in Aldeburgh Bay. Coxswain Cole and his crew at once put about and came ashore, and he called upon the crew to board the lifeboat, but they refused to leave. After being again asked to go aboard the lifeboat, and refusing, the coxswain left the boat, and, by means of the telephone, informed the Aldeburgh Coastguard that

AGRICULTURE IN SUFFOLK.

[By Our Special Correspondent.]

Lightning, thunder, floods! Such is the meteorological record for the second week in November. I might have added wind, which, in the words of the old sailor, has "thundered at the cliffs as if to knock them down." True, there has been a terrible night or two, and some of us have had a few anxious thoughts about poor fellows on the briny, though landlubbers such as we can know but little about the terrors of the sea. To the nearest approach to it, so far, at least, as many inland farmers are concerned, are the acres of water to be seen on the lowlands as we drive through the county, the result of repeated downfalls of rains, which were anything but "dainty April showers." The complaint is bitter that the rivers seem to have been laid to believe by those who appear familiar with the meanderings of waters a few feet below the surface—how many I do not know—that the lower springs have not yet got into healthy or free working order. In the name of this is the want of supply from above, there won't surely be such cause for complaint on that score if "the weather bide" like it is at the time I am writing. This is what the Standard correspondent says in reference to the weather, and it seems to be borne out by the reports of a greater opportunity of judging of the condition of

of the country than I have. He says:—"Another week has been added to the prolonged period of rainy weather, and that it has been a wet one, and with a windchill in most parts of the country. Where farmers have taken advantage of a few hours' absence of rain to store the residue of their mangolds the carting has been done at the cost of much damage to the land, and there are still many acres of both fields, the measurements are not yet all secured. As to wheat-sowing, it is because quite impracticable on heavy soils, and ploughing has been greatly hindered. Whatever the records of the Meteorological Department of Greenwich for the year 1894 will certainly stand exceptionally high. Except for a portion of September, there has been no settled fine weather in the greater part of England since the middle of April. Indeed, the measurements were above the average in most districts in May, June, July, and August, and in many in October also; while November bids fair to prove one of the wettest months of the year. But as already observed, it is the frequency of rainstorms which has rendered the season most remarkable, and which has rendered the season peculiarly

HARASSING TO FARMERS.

When a great quantity of rain falls in a day or two, a large portion of it runs off the land; but when the same quantity is spread over two or three weeks, it is enough to keep the land constantly wet and unfitted for advantageous cultivation. A wet autumn is a very bad preparation for the following year's crops, not only because of its effect upon the sowing of its own period, but also because it renders impossible the ploughing of land for spring corn and roots in good condition before the time of hard frost or snow is to be expected. In ploughing on the heavy soils, there is a great deal of damage to the land, even in a wet autumn, while the sheep necessarily swallow a good deal of dirt, which is not conducive to their health, but often causes loose among them. Under existing circumstances of this kind, even as a serious expense for labour, to pull the turnips and cart them on to a dry meadow for the sheep. This plan, however, has a special disadvantage, apart from its costliness, as the manuring is lost to the turnip field, and must be made up in some other way. For many reasons, then, farmers are longing for dry weather." Reports of this kind must have a special interest to most of us, because, reading between the lines, we discover in other parts of England a different condition of things agricultural from those which obtain in East Anglia. It has often been the subject of remark that agriculturists all over the kingdom cannot be brought to agree to co-operate upon matters in reference to which the public have an interest, the best means of securing their adoption was heartily carried.

Next Monday week has been fixed for the opening of the new Lodge of Unity, Freemasons, which are to meet at the Red Lion Hotel, Bramford Road, Ipswich. There is little doubt that the Lodge will receive hearty support from that part of the borough.

Monday was another red-letter day, when the Deputy-Grand Master of the Manchester Unity (Bro. W. Oxford White, J.P.), on Monday paid a surprise visit to Saxmundham, and met with a very cordial reception from the members of the "Fidelity" Lodge. This was the first time in its history that the Lodge had been honoured by a visit from a Deputy-Grand Master. Bro. William Jordan, P.P.G.M. who presided, remarked that the presence of the Deputy-Grand Master of the Unity at a meeting called to discuss "Oddfellowship" was very desirable and greatly appreciated. Interesting papers on the principles of the Order were read by Bros. W. Hayward, and Geo. Easey took part. This is a step in the right direction, and cannot fail to widen the knowledge of Oddfellowship in the public-houses, followed by an address by the Deputy G.M., who received Lodge honours. He complimented the young brethren who had read excellent papers and the Lodge generally upon its energetic management. Dealing with the question of Oddfellowship in the public-houses, Bro. Oxford White deprecated the use of surplus capital for management purposes, and concluded by advising the Lodge to go on in its good work, and he had no doubt their indefatigable secretary would be able to fill his Lodge-room Jubilee meeting next year they would have 400 financial members. At intervals, songs were sung by Bros. Plant, Mills, and others.

A recent return, compiled with the view of showing that a great majority of friendly society lodges meet in public-houses, will be read with interest by Suffolk brethren who are so largely dependent on country hospitality for their accommodation. From the returns some of the figures:—Foresters' Lodges, held in public-houses, 3,196, not held in public-houses, 682; Oddfellows' Lodges 2,992, 720; Druids 522, 33; Amalgamated Engineers 348, 22; Free Gardeners 655, 65; total 7,713, 1,522. Juvenile branches are not included in these returns.

Referring to the recent magisterial elevation of Bro. W. C. Smith, the Sheffield Morning Telegraph says:—"Magazine readers will cordially congratulate D.G.M. White on his appointment to the borough bench of Ipswich. Bro. W. Orford White's turning men and Oddfellow is sufficient proof that his services as Justice of the Peace will be of fully equal value to the Ipswich townsmen as those he has rendered in another sphere have been by the Manchester Unity."

WOODBRIDGE LOCAL BOARD.

EXIT THE OLD AUTHORITY.

At a special meeting of this Board held on Tuesday evening, Mr. T. Carthew presiding, there were present:—Messrs. J. B. Hart, Alfred Barnes, Geo. Carter, J. Woolnough, Thomas Cobbold, Edward Cobbold, W. C. Rowland, John Loder, John Andrews, A. J. Hayward, and A. S. Cross.—A letter was received from Mr. W. M. Peasood (Inspector of Nuisances) to the effect that the postal authorities for permission to erect a wall

LETTER BOX AT MAIDEN'S GRAVE.

On the motion of Mr. Andrews, the Clerk was instructed to reply that the Board had no objection to the proposal.—An informal report was given by Mr. Hart, Mr. Nunn, and Mr. Woolnough of a little drive to Street, which matter was referred to the Surveyor's Committee at the last meeting of the Board. They stated that the Committee were of opinion that the road should not be taken over at present. Messrs. Andrews, Cobbold, Nunn, and Woolnough attended when the meeting having been made up by the owners it ought to be taken over and asked on what grounds it was considered a bad road.—Mr. J. Garnham said it was not a unanimous report, it being only carried by a majority of one. The matter was eventually postponed until the next meeting of the Board.

THE NEW BOARD.

Mr. C. Naunton reported that a meeting could be done in reference to the forthcoming election. Would it not be well to request the churchwardens to call a town meeting for the purpose of nominating the candidates to be made for the new Board, so as to avoid a contested election if possible?—The Clerk stated that notices would be posted on the church doors, and candidates must be received on the 5th December. There would be no expenses attached to it for every candidate, which must be signed by a proposer and seconder, and the Chairman considered they must leave themselves in the hands of the Parish Council to nominate them.—It was the last meeting before the nomination day, of thanking the members of the Board for the kind support which they had given to the Board. Mr. Hart said they had satisfied their constituents.—Mr. John Loder congratulated the Board on the unanimity with which business had been conducted, and on the good work of that was due to the kindness and courtesy of their Chairman. He only hoped that the new Board would work as harmoniously as they had done. The Clerk had very great pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks to the Chairman, which was unanimously passed, and Mr. Carthew in responding thanked the Clerk (Mr. Brooke) for the valuable assistance he had given to him and the Board.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and Dryness, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, Bronchitis are all affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands in the throat they promote a copious flow of saliva, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d., tins, 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London." Dr. Moore, in his work on "Nose and Throat Diseases," says: "The Glycerine Jujubes prepared by James Epps and Co. are deservedly popular as a curative or palliative agent," while Dr. Gordon Holmes, Senior Physician to the Throat Department of the Dublin Hospitals, writes: "After an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit in almost all forms of throat disease."

FRIENDLY SOCIETY NOTES.

[Specially Contributed.]

As we recently pointed out in these columns, Oddfellows, Foresters and other friendly society brethren are forbidden to introduce politics into their lodge meetings, but that does not prevent them exercising the rights of citizenship in matters affecting the welfare of the community in which they live as whole. Some of the most clear headed and shrewd members of local governing bodies are friendly society men, and the question has suggested itself, why not extend their sphere of service to the new parish and rural district councils? We notice that in Essex—at Burnham-on-Crouch—where there is a prosperous court of Foresters, much interest is being taken in the forthcoming parish council elections, and that the court intends to nominate several candidates. This is a step in a great order in the right direction, and one especially with the labouring classes, no doubt there are very many eligible candidates; but we hope the court, as such, will not venture on such treacherous ground. Political feeling will doubtless be infused into the contest, if any, and the chances are that the court, as a whole, will have to bear the onus of creating political strife.

Another friendly society official in the Eastern Counties has gone wrong. This time the "Crown" Court of the A.O.F., Loughton, are the sufferers by the loss of nearly £60. The defaulter was a bootmaker, 55 years of age, and the fact that he was found out last Saturday indicated at the Essex Assizes for converting to his own use monies of the Court of which he was trustee, amounting to £58 15s. In addition to being trustee, the prisoner also acted as minute secretary and treasurer, and when the Court's books were audited preparatory to auditing the books, Parker made an excuse that he was ill, but it afterwards transpired that he had absconded, he being eventually apprehended at Lowisham. In the result Parker was found guilty, and Mr. Justice Pollock was satisfied that the indictment was valid, and Parker being found guilty, his lordship sentenced the prisoner to ten months' hard labour. Parker, it transpired, had previously served five years' penal servitude, but this case only served to once more prove the fallacy of Courts and lodges investing too great a confidence in individual officers.

Court 8,203 "Isabel Gurney," A.O.F., the first female Foresters' Court established in East Anglia, celebrated its first anniversary at Norwich last week. Although only twelve months have elapsed since the institution of the "Isabel Gurney" is now the largest female Court in the Order, and can boast a record unequalled by any other Court, male or female, having initiated over 170 members since its establishment and has paid away £43 in the way of benefits, having money in hand to meet emergencies. Norwich will prove a worthy example for the Ipswich female Foresters.

In the course of an important conference at Witham, on Monday, on the question of old age pensions and parish relief, a worthy tribute was paid to our friendly societies for the share they had taken in keeping the people from the parish. Mr. Rix, who acted as chairman to the practical application of old age pensions, Canon Snell strongly urged the advisability of making use of friendly societies and Post Office machinery already in existence. There was a total membership of one and a quarter millions of working people—or eight out of ten—who belonged to clubs of some kind or other, with a capital of over 20 millions of money. It would be an utter impossibility to do away with these—they were a national institution, and a very good one. Rate and State help should only be given after a man had earned it by keeping up his club payments. A resolution approving the principle of old age pensions and agreeing that friendly societies were the best means of securing their adoption was heartily carried.

A VISIT TO THE SHIPWASH LIGHTSHIP.

INTERESTING SKETCH OF LIFE ON BOARD.

[Specially contributed.]

We had been having lovely calm weather at Aldeburgh, Suffolk, and thought we would take advantage of it to pay a visit to the Shipwash Lightship, about seven miles S.E. of Aldeburgh. Rod Newham was on the morning after our voyage and found a strong S.E. wind blowing and the sea putting on her white caps, the hearts of some of our party sank a little; but we never thought of postponing the expedition, as we had spent all the day previous planning our excursion, and had arranged for the men on board the Lightship, also laying in a stock of tobacco, fruit and vegetables for them, and sandwiches and other light provisions for ourselves. So at ten o'clock, when the tide served boys, we gathered on that part of the beach appropriated by our lifeboat coxswain, Cable, our party consisting of seven young people with two matrons to chaperone them. We sailed in the "Kitty," one of Cable's comfortable pleasure boats and our crew consisted of Cable and his son Will. We shoved off in excellent spirits, though some of us felt dashing over our bows as we cut along through the water. The wind was dead against us, but by 11.30 the flag buy (sailors till we got opposite the Orford Lighthouse, we had to make a long tack back, passing through very troubled water and a choppy sea off Bawdsey Buoy. We then bore down on the lightship, hoping to fetch her, but found we could not do it on that tack. But by this time I am afraid I must draw a veil over the sufferings of some of our party, though the spirits of the others were very much enlivened by our songsters who sat in the bow singing all the nigger songs she could remember, and joining in the line at "When you were a-boy build," with its lugubrious ending, "When the sea grew up her dead!" About this time, too, we noticed that any references or suggestions made with regard to lunch were immediately frowned upon. We tacked again and again to sea, to the despair of the party, who thought we were leaving the lightship behind us, and should never reach her; but at last, after a voyage of 3½ hours, during which time we managed to traverse about twice the distance between Aldeburgh and the lightship, we managed to fetch her, and soon made fast alongside of her. Before this we noticed that the men on the ship were preparing to receive us, and had put their ladder over the side to help us on board.

DIFFICULTY IN GETTING ON BOARD,

but when there, found a warm welcome awaiting us. The skipper stood at the top of the gangway, and handed us all aboard with as much ceremony as if it had been a yacht instead of a lightship. Everything is agreeable, as she is only moored to one anchor, and this proved the finishing touch to some of our party, and for some little time it was remarkable how everyone seemed to be standing on their heads or in the most different corners of the ship. When our equilibrium was somewhat restored, we went over the lightship, conducted by the lamplighter, who explained to us the working of the revolving light, which is let down to be wound up every seven days, and is lighted up by oil. The lamps which compose it are kept wonderfully clean and bright, the tin reflectors looking like silver, and the plate-glass which surrounds the whole is polished like a looking-glass. The ship was beautifully clean, in fact, the whole of the ship was beautifully clean and well kept, and looked very smart. We went into the men's cabin; there were eight or nine of them on board, and all scarcely devouring the contents of our hampers, as they had not had a visit from the provision merchant for some time, and that would be far too manly a course for a Radical Government to adopt. Oh, by the way, I must not forget to mention that the men had one for three weeks, nor seen a visitor in all that time; so that we were duly appreciated. They did not much care about the telephone, which is just going to be established to connect them with the shore, as they have a telephone for private use on board, and can communicate with the shore, as also can the Corporation of Aldeburgh. Let us hope that they will signal every passing vessel. The men occupy their spare time in and one of our matrons carried off a nice little model yacht for her boy at school. The captain showed us his cabin in the stern, which was very comfortable, and the lamp-lighter his, where the spare lamps are kept in case of accident. They also sounded their foghorn, which is worked by a steam engine underneath, and the captain afterwards showed us in his cabin three strips of paper with the waves of sound duly registered, and the hour and minute marked. This is done every day, and is sent on to the Trinity House to be examined. They were expecting the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House to pay them a visit of inspection soon. Then we one Aldeburgh man on board (Tibbenham, Hunt and Co.) and another from Yarmouth. The two matrons now, "on hospitable thoughts intent," tried to persuade their party to enjoy some of the good things they had brought, but alas! no one felt inclined to enjoy anything but the hard biscuits and cheese which were most liberally handed round by the captain. So all the sandwiches, gingerbeer, cherries, and other provisions were given to the lightship crew—not much self-denial on our part, while our own appetites were not spoiled.

AN EXAMPLE OF REAL UNSELFISHNESS

by leaving them the beer and provisions we had provided for their own meal. We looked out on the waste of waters round us, trying to realise that those breakers we saw were on the shore of the Goodwin Sands, lay about beneath us, where so many gallant vessels had gone to their doom. Only last November, the same day that the Finnish barque, Venskapen, went down with the loss of all on board, the Aldeburgh, Cable and his son set out and picked up in the evening from Harwich (where they had safely landed those Finnish sailors), in answer to signals from the lightship, but when they got to the spot they found only floating cargo and wreckage strewn about, the lightship and her crew never being heard of again, and so it often happens. But imagine the intense excitement of those watching from the lightship when they see a gallant vessel struck, maimed, and waiting for her doom, and then the anxiety and suspense of the Aldeburgh lifeboat or the Harwich one bearing down upon them. Oh, the RACE BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH!

And when, as so often happens, too, the lifeboat wins in the race, and saves the poor crew of their broken bit of wreckage, and when possible on board the lightship to be warmed, revived, and reclothed, is not such a moment worth the dreary waiting days and nights when the sea rages and roars, and the lamplighter has to lighten their tedium and bring them news of the outer world? With yarns such as these the crew regaled us, and after the best part of an hour spent on board and a nice chat with each of the crew in turn we took our leave. For one or two of them we were asked to perform some little services, a letter to be written or a message taken to wife, mother or sweetheart, when we got ashore. They all hung over the ship's side, waving their caps and giving something nice, as we said, "We shan't have such a pleasant day as this again till the 15th," naming the day, some weeks ahead, when some were going to be relieved. They spend two months at sea and one on shore, and the latter experience I am told is not enjoyable, "We shall think of you to-night when we see the light revolving!" That very night there was a terrible thunder-storm, and we did think of them, and hoped that no harm would come to any of them, though the morning brought us news of the lightship having been struck on board their fishing smack, besides other terrible disasters. But this is a digression. Having torn ourselves away from our hospitable entertainers, and waved handkerchiefs and shouted our last sight, we

the wind being favourable; in fact the run home occupied less than an hour and a half, and, without a single tack, we beached our boat in the right place, at the right time, and all got safely ashore, and had a most delightful day.

A Sharp Fraud.—The meanest of impositions is the fraudulent sale of worthless imitations or substitutes for the medicines that will restore life and health. The numerous newspaper reports of wonderful cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have led many people to seek this remedy; but the public is warned against worthless Pills sold loose, or by the dozen or hundred (in mere boxes and market-places as well as shops), and against imitations, purporting to be "the same except in name" as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The genuine Pills are never sold in this way, but are safely commended by some unscrupulous dealers as a substitute for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not like any other medicine, and no relative can prepare them. They are only sold in wooden boxes, the wrapper of which bears the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If in doubt, send direct to Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, who will forward the Pills at their own expense. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a special remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, locomotor ataxy, St.-Vitus' dance, nervous headache, scrofula, chronic erysipelas, and all forms of nervous debility, but they restore pale and sallow complexions to the glow of health, and are a specific for troubles peculiar to the female system, in many cases effecting a radical cure in all cases arising from worry, overwork, or excess of any nature.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ENTOMOLOGISTS AND THE IPSWICH MUSEUM.

[To the Editor.]

Sir,—Will you allow me space to call the attention of Entomologists to the collection of Lepidoptera in the Ipswich Museum? An effort is being made to get together a series of British species, and especially of such species as occur in Suffolk; this effort, I hope to go on to the Mirror. The Rev. E. R. Bloomfield's list of Suffolk Lepidoptera contains 546 species of Heterocera to the end of the Noctuæ, and many of these species is complete, so far as types go, a full representation of the Suffolk Macrolepidoptera, and for the all England Collection, the Curator of Mirror would be glad to say, 703. Of some species there are only one or two specimens and, of course, in a young collection any good specimens are welcome, whether they be types or be faulty or complete series. I shall be glad to send lists of requirements to any who are willing to help towards the completion of this collection, which will be of value to young students and others. Something has been done in the Dyrahlyon group, and only specimens of these and of Tortricina, of Micro Lepidoptera will be thankfully received.—I am, &c.,

WHO IS OUR FOREIGN MINISTER?

[To the Editor.]

Sir,—I had an idea when Lord Rosebery became Premier that he would succeed Mr. Kimberley in the Foreign Office, and if I remember aright your daily contemporary rapturously approved of the appointment. In the event of your favourite contemporary's wish Mr. Kimberley was like the Little Waiver of Duleek Gate,

"The man of all ans,
Who letter more sore and ten
At a blow."

But somehow or other it appears to me the Norfolk Earl is not the man for the post, and he has absolutely cut—extinguished by the Premier himself. The Earl of Kimberley is like all Englishmen, a kind, genial fellow, but only half enough sore to be Foreign Minister of England. No one with any pluck would have allowed Mr. Gladstone to "bully" him as he did, playing second fiddle without kicking up a row with Lord Rosebery. It is very strange, but perfectly true, that the Earl of Kimberley is not the right man for the Foreign Minister. They haven't sufficient ability to cope with foreign Powers, but they have just sense enough to know that they are not fitted for the post, and that's about all. A pretty mess Lord Rosebery is getting the country into with China and Japan. Who but a Radical Premier would have left the Mediterranean to be insulted, or one of her battleships to be sunk in the time of peace? Why, the very foreigner had only looked disrespectfully on one of our ships-of-the-line in the time of Nelson he would have annihilated them had they been in the Mediterranean, and I think that he wouldn't have waited for any orders from Pitt or King George. Likewise no foreign Power dare have insulted England in the time of Lord Beaconsfield, Salisbury, or Salisbury at the head of affairs. We shall see what will be the result of this precious foreign policy. Our Premier is getting old, and he will soon be taking his last will, of course, be of no consequence to a Radical Government, which cares for nothing save a House in Bills, and the destruction of the time-honoured rights of the House of Lords. Then, again, had there been a proper man as Viceroy in India, such as Lord Roberts, do you think that Russia would have dared to march her troops? But with Lord Elgin they dare play with impunity. Lord Elgin is a good fellow, but the Parsons in the Government couldn't get anyone else; his only qualification being that his father was once Viceroy. Another thing that I cannot understand is, how to be wondered at with Lord Elgin in India and Mr. Fowler in the Indian Office, whose policy will breed discontent and confusion for the future, Lord Rosebery will do at home. Then it looks to me as if Lord Ripon is asleep or else afraid to act, or he would put a stop to the French fishermen fishing within the 3-mile limit. Perhaps

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES OF EYE.

CHAT WITH AN EX-TOWN COUNCILLOR.

A FORGOTTEN INCIDENT OF IPSWICH HUSTINGS.

New Suffolk boroughs possess greater historical interest than the borough of Eye, which, from various causes, is not the thriving place it was 20 years ago; and still fewer towns have a more peculiar political history. The recent "crooked" municipal contest in the borough of three letters, together with the object of redeeming a promised visit to the town, the other day attracted a Journal man to that place; and in the course of a long and profitable conversation with Mr. Chas. Ship, cordwainer, ex-Town Councillor, parochial auditor, and ex-assistant overseer, the following interesting data respecting many events associated with the borough, of which the present generation are totally ignorant. After extending a cordial welcome to his visitor, Mr. Ship, who, it is no exaggeration to say, is one of the best known individuals in that part of the country, sat down and at once proceeded to relate a few of the incidents he remembered during the 58 years' association with the district.—"Yes," he replied, in answer to his interrogator, "I have been connected with Eye and its neighbourhood all my life, and have closely followed its history politically, socially, and municipally. Eye was a 'pocket borough,' up to the passing of the Reform Bill of 1832. Political peace prevailed for 40 years—that is to say there had been no contest, municipal or Parliamentary, worth mentioning for 40 years prior to 1874. During the greater part of that time the borough had been represented by the Kerrison family—first by Colonel Sir Edward Kerrison, of the 14th Royal Dragoon Guards, of Waterloo fame. Prior to the Kerrisons, Eye was represented by the Long Wellesley family. In 1842 'the Generals,' as he was familiarly called, had a beautiful Gothic cross erected on his Oakley Park estate. Horace, in memory of his favourite charger, which carried him in the campaign of Waterloo, the Peninsular War, and in the battle of Waterloo. He was followed in the representation of the borough by his son, who, at the request of a large number of influential members of his party in the county, relinquished his Parliamentary seat for Eye, and contested East Suffolk, which seat he won and held for some years, until failing health compelled him to retire from our Parliamentary life entirely."—"And Sir Edward was followed by?"—"Lord Barrington, who represented the borough until 1874, when the first contest for 40 years, of which I was speaking, took place. His lordship's opponent on that occasion was Mr. Chas. Tacon, who had contested the borough and had previously unsuccessfully contested both East and West Suffolk. Lord Barrington, however, triumphed by a magnificent majority, and continued to represent us until the early part of 1880, when, on the dissolution of Lord Beaconsfield's last Government, Lord Barrington went to the Upper House with the title of Baron Shute."—"Is it true that Eye became notorious in the old days for its illegal method of election?"—"Well, it had that reputation, but I don't think there was anything like the amount of bribery and corruption which the unfriendly Blue Book of 1833 would lead you to believe committed. However, to continue my story. It was a plucky fight on Mr. Easton's part, and the reason he succeeded in heading our contingent is clear. I think there were only a thousand voters—was due to his lavish promises to the labourer, promises which are characteristic of certain Radicals I could mention in these days, and were made only to remain unredeemed. Mr. Easton obtained about 300 votes from the labouring population; but it is from that time (1874) that I date the origin of political strife in Eye. Since then there has not been any cessation of political excitement, and very few municipal elections which have not been challenged. Coming to the year 1880 the Conservatives were in a good position for obtaining a seat to 'swap horses when crossing the stream'. Lord Barrington having left, Lord Henniker created a seat, for the first time it had been noticed that the daily stock of boiled rice, not to speak of vegetables and other minor eatables, was not disposed of as usually, I formed a meeting and in a most unaccountable manner. This was first ascribed to rats, but the theory had to be abandoned on account of the large quantity taken and the fact that the food was skilfully abstracted in broad daylight. A watch was kept, yet without success, and the mystery remained. In mysterious disappearances were finally attributed to some malicious fox, and offerings were made at the shrine of Reynard to shrine to secure freedom from further molestation. But even this devout step proved without avail. At last the police were called in, but their efforts were also fruitless, because they could not know where to look for the missing articles. Of course, the mystery was solved in the following manner. The Rev. F. B. Zincke, of Wherstead, was the most systematic of clergymen, and 'stumped' the whole of the Division. When the election came the late Mr. B. B. Hunter Rodwell—acknowledged to be one of the best agricultural representatives possible — was the defeated Tory candidate, and the Radical party had only a short lease of power, and soon we were in the throes of another election, and for the second time Mr. Rodwell was defeated.

THE LATE SIR EDWARD KERRISON,
